

LAWREN YOUNG

Care Coordinator

Lawren has a long and accomplished history in patient care, going back to the beginning of her career as a social worker helping patients navigate Medicare/Medicaid and insurance questions. So you might guess she has always enjoyed building relationships with patients over time and going the extra mile for them. She complements these interpersonal skills with strong attention to detail, organization and problem-solving.

How did you get into prosthetics/orthotics care?

When I came across Atlantic ProCare, it just clicked for me. My grandfather was an amputee, so I already had a window into what it is like for patients and their loved ones. So, it was an exciting prospect to work with this population and to see the amazing advances made in this area over two decades!

Working in this field has also brought me closer to my 98-year-old grandmother. She loves to hear me talk about my job, and it is a joy for her to reminisce with me about my grandfather.

How do you unwind?

Naps, napping, and more naps!

What do you find most rewarding about your work?

Getting to be a part of a patient's path back to walking – and thriving! Being there from their first visit to the office to the day they're walking on a new prosthesis, and getting to know them along the way!

What's your kryptonite?

The Sun!

How does your work make a difference?

As a social worker with experience in healthcare, I know our support and encouragement, during a time that can be so overwhelming, makes the difference. In addition to our expertise and the clinical services we provide, we also make the extra effort to get to know our patients, to listen to them, or to just call and check in on them. And we share in their excitement about the progress they are making!

What's the most stressful part of your day?

Answering these questions!
